A note about university entrance qualifications and contextual factors;

If you are contacting universities to discuss entry qualifications, we suggest you mention you are a LEAPS student. Sometimes this means you will be eligible for an adjusted offer, or lower entry requirements. Universities may also consider other factors like school attended, postcode, or experience of care. This varies between universities, and not all consider these factors in the same way!

Universities may call this contextual admissions, adjusted offers or widening access and they all have further details on their websites. LEAPS can help advise you on the offer you should be eligible for, too.
